Sexual Assault is actual, attempted, or threatened sexual contact with another person without that person's consent. Consent must be informed, freely and actively given, and mutually understood. If physical force, coercion, intimidation, and/or threats are used, there is no consent. If the victim/survivor is mentally or physically incapacitated or impaired so that the victim/survivor cannot understand the fact, nature or extent of the sexual situation, and the condition was or would be known to a reasonable person, there is no consent. This includes conditions due to alcohol or drug consumption, or being asleep or unconscious.

WHAT CAN I DO?

ACADEMICS

My grades are suffering because of the assault. What can I do?

It is very common to have difficulty concentrating on studying or focusing on coursework. The Aurora Center offers academic advocacy and can contact your instructors on your behalf. Without disclosing details, an advocate can explain the stress you may be experiencing and the need for flexibility in meeting deadlines.

What if my perpetrator is in the same class as me?

It can be scary and distracting for many survivors to attend class with a perpetrator. The Aurora Center can help you work with instructors, advisors, and departments to ensure your academic success.

What if my perpetrator lives in the same Residence Hall as I do?

You have the right to be safe in your home. The Aurora Center will work with Housing and Residential Life to arrange for safe housing within 24 hours. The Aurora Center can also find temporary shelter if you live off-campus.

HOUSING

I see my perpetrator on campus and feel uncomfortable. What should I do?

It can be distressing to see your perpetrator on campus. If you feel unsafe, please contact the Aurora Center and we can help you develop a safety plan, apply for a restraining order, or seek recourse through the University's judicial system.

REPORTING

Should I file a police report?

Making a police report after a sexual assault can be a very difficult decision for survivors. Uncertainty about reporting the assault is common, especially if you know the perpetrator. An Aurora Center advocate can describe to you what filing a police report entails and be with you as you file a report with the police officer.

What should I tell my parents about what happened?

Ultimately it will be your choice whether or not you disclose to your parents about the incident. Some people find their parents to be supportive and part of the healing process. Others express concern about hurting their parents or fearing blame for the attack. Advocates can help you with the decision to disclose to your parents.

PERSONAL CONCERNS

My assailant and I have mutual friends, or my assailant is in my group of friends.

This situation is common, since most assaults occur between acquaintances. Friends may take sides and you may be unsure whom to turn to. Surround yourself with people who support, respect, and believe you.

Do you worry about dating again?

For many survivors, it can be difficult to regain trust after an assault. Healing will occur at your own pace. Start in social situations or by going on double dates where you can feel in control and safe. When you are ready to date, don't hesitate to be clear about your limits and boundaries.
